

Gas Convection and Diffusion

A major component of the mammalian circulation system is the transport of dissolved gas through the body by means of convection and diffusion.