

Problem 103A

Archimedes principle states that the upward buoyancy force on a submerged object is equal to the weight of the fluid displaced by that object. In class we proved that this was true for an incompressible fluid (constant density,  $\rho$ ). Analyse the case of a compressible fluid and determine whether or not it is true for a compressible fluid.